

Mark Hutchison

Nevada Lieutenant Governor

In 2014, while serving as State Senator, Mark Hutchison convincingly won the general election to serve as Nevada's 34th Lieutenant Governor. Mark is a third-generation Nevadan. He and his wife Cary have six children and four grandchildren. Both Mark and his children were educated in Nevada's public school system.

After graduating from Bonanza High School, Mark earned a business administration degree, Phi Kappa Phi, from the University of Nevada, Las Vegas and received his law degree, magna cum laude, from Brigham Young University. He is a small business owner who built his law firm, Hutchison and Steffen, from the ground up starting in 1996, which is now one of Nevada's largest law firms, employing nearly 100 Nevadans.

As Lieutenant Governor, Mark is a member of Governor Brian Sandoval's cabinet and serves as President of the State Senate. He is also the Chairman of the Commission on Tourism, Vice-Chairman of the State Board of Transportation, and a member of the Board of the Governor's Office of Economic Development.

Mark is deeply honored by the trust Nevadans have placed in him to serve as Lieutenant Governor and since his election has been focused on being the hardest working and most effective Lieutenant Governor possible. His time is dedicated to promoting economic development and job growth and Nevada's world-class tourist destinations along with supporting policies to strengthen families and improve educational opportunities for Nevada students.
